In Roman times this location was important in producing a fish paste known as "garum". The ruins also include the baths in which the mariners used to bathe.

The neighboring town of Quarteira was once upon a time small a fishing village (with a daily fishing market) that has since the 1960s blossomed into a bustling town, with the most colorful gypsy market every Wednesday morning which is great for gifts. Also just under 10 minutes drive away is the Aquashow water and theme park which is excellent for all ages.
